

Health Law

The Governor of Ohio appointed a Chancellor of Education to help streamline the higher education system making it easier for Ohio's citizens to gain degrees as well as to eliminate some of the overlap of the state universities. As a result of the study and input accompanying this task, Cleveland State University—and therefore Cleveland-Marshall College of Law—will be emphasizing Health Care in the curriculum. In the past the law school has had a strong health care program, and this will be strengthened again in the near future. CSU's connections with the Cleveland Clinic, a world renowned health care provider and research institution, are very strong and they continue to grow.

The student run publication, The Journal of Law and Health is an on-line journal that can be seen by clicking here.

The members of the Journal bring topical speakers to the school each year to discuss the intersection of law and health issues. Many of the presentations are contained on the website.
