

Cleveland-Marshall College of Law
1st Annual Symposium Day

Expert panels address three topics:

1. Trustbusting Big Tech
2. Legal Implications of Rideshare Technology
3. The Future of the Legalization of Medical Marijuana

Friday, December 6
9 am – 6 pm

5 hours CLE pending

The Cnobis Group

The Cleveland State Law Review, the Global Business Law Review (GBLR), and the Journal of Law and Health (JLH) have joined together to present the law school's first annual "Symposium Day" on Friday, December 6. The 5-hour CLE will offer attendees the opportunity to hear experts across three trending areas that reflect changes in how we live as a broader society and the emerging legal issues that they present. The topics include Trustbusting Big Tech from the Law Review, Legal implications of Ridesharing from GBLR, and the Future of the Legalization of Marijuana from JHL.

"Cleveland State Law Review chose the topic "Trustbusting Big Tech" because, as millennials, we are fascinated with how our government intends to regulate the platforms we grew up with (like Amazon, Facebook, Google, and Apple) while also promoting competition in the marketplace," says Patrick Lipaj, Law Review editor-in-chief.
