

Student Profile: From Scientist to Dean's Leadership Fellow, Jameson Tibbs

CSU Cleveland-Marshall College of Law 1L Student Jameson Tibbs has already immersed himself in C|M|LAW student life during his first year of law school. Tibbs is President of the Cleveland-Marshall Cyber Law Association, Vice-President of the Cleveland-Marshall Health Law Society and Secretary of the Cleveland-Marshall Student Intellectual Property Law Association.

In addition to those on-campus leadership programs, he is also involved with C|M|LAW as a member of the first class of Dean's Leadership Fellows.

The C|M|LAW Dean's Leadership Fellows Program, created by Dean Lee Fisher as part of the P. Kelly Tompkins Leadership and Law Program, admits a select number of J.D. students who demonstrate outstanding achievement and leadership potential.

The Dean's Leadership Fellows Program was one of the main reasons Tibbs decided to move across the country to attend law school at Cleveland-Marshall. Tibbs studied neuroscience at UCLA and spent the past two decades in Los Angeles.

Tibbs entered law school with a wealth of career experience, unique in both breadth and scope. He worked as a graduate research student and advanced to doctoral candidacy in neuroscience at UCLA. His extensive research centered on analyzing animal tissue, including research and statistical analysis of the data and generated simulations on cat hindlimbs for neural prosthesis. He has also studied cognitive decline during oxygen deprivation from brain tissue and developed 3D models of the heart and underlying structures for predicting electrical activity associated with arrhythmias.
