Advocates for Bail Reform Legislation at Ohio Statehouse CSU Cleveland-Marshall College of Law 3L student Kailey Leary had the

considered by Ohio's state legislature, as part of the CSU C|M|LAW Criminal Justice Center's new Pretrial Justice Clinic. "Researching and preparing my testimony in support of SB 182 was an incredible opportunity and exercise in learning more about the format of bills opportunity to advocate for Senate Bill 182, bail reform legislation being and the process of passing new bills," explained Kailey. "I am very grateful to have had the opportunity to work closely with Professor Triozzi during my time in the Pretrial Justice Clinic. The Pretrial Justice Clinic, taught by Professor Robert J. Triozzi, a former Cleveland Municipal Court Judge with an experiential background in both prosecution and criminal defense, provides students with the opportunity to fill a critical need in the criminal justice system – oral and written advocacy for indigent defendants during the initial bail process. The aim of the Clinic is not only to provide students with meaningful legal experience in the courtroom, but to specifically contribute their efforts toward a significant and growing need in the criminal justice system – the need for effective legal representation for defendants at this early but pivotal stage in the criminal justice process. Read More

"In 1973, I began law school at Cleveland-Marshall without a clue of what I was doing. So few women choosing this route; so little money available for post-graduate education; concerns about where and how to live. Cleveland-Marshall helped me address the challenges with grants, faculty wisdom, on campus employment, gifted and hilarious classmates (who became lifelong friends) and a vision of a productive and happy life as a lawyer. Could I have asked for more?" Read More
